

AUTOIMMUNE HEPATITIS AWARENESS

Course Number

S1

Validity

3 Years

Duration

3 Hours

Assessment

-

This Autoimmune Hepatitis (AIH) Awareness course provides delegates with essential knowledge to support individuals living with this rare liver condition. The session explores the basic anatomy and function of the liver, the causes and prevalence of AIH, and how the condition affects individuals physically and emotionally. Delegates will learn about diagnosis, treatment pathways, and the importance of delivering person-centred care in line with current guidelines. This course is suitable for healthcare staff, support workers, and carers involved in supporting individuals with liver-related conditions.

Introduction

- Introduction and course overview

Course Programme

- Liver function and basic anatomy overview
- Understanding autoimmune hepatitis: causes and prevalence
- Signs, symptoms, diagnosis, and prognosis
- Treatment options and care considerations
- Summary, assessment, and course evaluation

Suitable for:

Care

"Autoimmune hepatitis (AIH) is an uncommon condition whereby someone's immune system attacks their liver. It is a controllable condition but cannot at this stage be cured." AIH UK